BUNCRANA AND CLONMANY.

BUNCRANA is a small market town, in the parish of LOWER FAHAN, barony of Innishowen West, county of Donegall, 152 miles n.w. by n. from Dublin, 12 n.n.w. from Londonderry, and 20 w. from Moville, romantically and pleasantly situated on the eastern shore of Lough Swilly, at the foot of the mountains of Innishowen. The town consists of one long street, near the centre of which is the market-house, a commodious structure, and adjoining it is an excellent hotel; a little below this, on the opposite side, is the sessions house, with a bridewell attached. Petty sessions are held every alternative Thursday. The spinning of flax and tow was carried on here very extensively by Messrs. Richardson and Company, who employed, when working, a great number of persons in their establishment, but owing to depression of trade the premises have for about five years been closed. The machinery is kept in working order, so that in the event of trade again reviving it can be started at a very short notice. From the beauty of its situation and the salubrity of the air, Bunrana has of late years been resorted to by respectable families in the summer as a bathing place. Lough Swilly here expands into an arm of the sea, bounded by mountains and rocks of a majestic character, and forming a capacious haven, easy of access to vessels of any burden. On the side of the entrance are the Swilly rocks, about half a mile from the shore; and on the western side of Fannet point is a lighthouse. Two rivers empty themselves into the Lough, one on each side of the town; in the northern or castle river, as it is called, is a valuable salmon fishery. From its central situation the town has been selected for the head quarters of the artillery force attached to the batteries on the Foyle and Swilly; and the constabulary have likewise stations here. Several vessels are engaged in fishing for soles, plaice, and turbot, which are taken off this coast in large quantities.

In the centre of the town stands the Protestant Episcopal church, a very neat edifice, with a square tower (containing a good clock), surmounted by a spire. The other places of worship are a Presbyterian meeting-house, a Roman Catholic church, and a chapel for Wesleyan Methodists. The general market day is Tuesday, and there is a market for grain every Friday. The fairs are May 15th, July 21st, September 8th, November 15th, and the last Fridays in the months of January, February, March, and December. The population of the town in 1861 was 686, and in 1871, 755.

CLONMANY is a village in the parish of its name, barony of East Innishowen, 11 miles from Bunrana. The places of worship are Protestant Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches. The population of the parish of Clonmany which contains also the hamlet of BALLYLIFFIN, was in 1861, 5,668 and in 1871, 5,311; at the latter period the village of Clonmany numbered 123, and that of Ballyliffin 101.
